

Irish Villages - Studies in local history

Karina Holton, Liam Clare & Brian Ó Daláigh, editors

This significant book is the first attempt to understand the problems of evolution in Irish villages from the local perspective. These essays contrast and compare particular villages from a wide geographical and temporal range, dealing with landlord, industrial, fishing and medieval villages.

Hardback: 320pp ills. 2003

ISBN:1-85182-766-8

The Kill and the Grange of medieval Clonkeen

Liam Clare

Kilmore Quay, county Wexford, 1800-1900

Rita Edwards

Cloone, county Leitrim; a monastery village, 1798-1910

Bríd Heslin

Carbury, county Kildare, 1744-1911

Karina Holton

Portlaw, county Waterford, 1875-1913: the decline of an industrial village

Tom Hunt

Kilmainham 1535-1610; the decline of a manorial village

Eithne Massey

Kilnalag to Williamstown, north county Galway, 1820-1850

Maeve Mulryan-Moloney

Ballycastle, a village on the north Mayo coast

Mealla C. Ní Ghiobúin

Sixmilebridge, county Clare, 1603-1911

Brian O Dálaigh

Pomeroy, county Tyrone, 1800-1960: 'a village perched on an elevation'

Austin Stewart

Karina Holton is co-editor of Irish Fairs and Markets that was published in 2001. Brian Ó Daláigh is co-editor of Irish Townlands (1998). Liam Clare is the author of Victorian Bray: a town adapts to changing times (1998). All the editors are post-graduates of NUI Maynooth's Studies in Local History programme.

Four Courts Press

7 Malpas Street, Dublin 8, Ireland.

Tel.: International + 353-1-453-4668

Fax: International + 353-1-453-4672

Email: info@fourcourtspress.ie

Web: www.fourcourtspress.ie